Section A: Reading

Read the following passage then answer all the questions that follow.

The extract is from a history book about World War 1.

1) World War 1 (1914 – 1918) was a turning point in world history. No previous conflict could match its scale of destruction. Millions of people died, often in battles that seemed to have no winners or losers – only dead and wounded. World War 1 was the first conflict to use modern technology on a wide scale. Armies and navies kept contact with radio and telegraph, while cars and trucks linked up with trains to move troops around. Modern industrial methods produced big guns that could send shells more than 15 km (9 miles). Submarines, aeroplanes, airships and tanks also made their first appearance in combat during the war. Hand grenades and barbed wire – all used for the first time as weapons during World War 1 – added to these deadly developments.

2) The most striking image of World War 1 is that of the trenches. On the great battlefields, huge armies lay in waiting, unable to advance against each other. Soldiers on each side dug long trenches. There, in the damp, muddy soil, they were forced to live with the constant noise of gunfire.

3) Private Donald Fraser's Journal describes his first experience of life in the trenches. The soldiers gave nicknames to many of the 'landmarks' in these enclosed quarters: "September 1915. Our loads were becoming troublesome. We had to rest frequently, but not for long. Dead Cow Corner was passed and at Beaver Hat we entered the skeleton remains of a belt of wood. Bullets were cracking in the trees. Strong Point II was soon passed. From here, the trench began to wind up the base of Wytschaete Ridge. On our right, the support line branched off.

4) "A hundred and fifty yards further on. We file into a trench near a couple of crosses marking the graves of former occupants. We are now only a few hundred yards away from the enemy so we move quietly. There is a perfect hiss of bullets overhead and a peculiar hum from those that ricochet. Our own men are firing in return and every bay gives forth a crack, crack. It is the custom as soon as darkness sets in for both sides to keep up more or less continuous fire at each other's trenches, to keep one another from attacking and also, to keep patrols from No Man's Land. It also shows that one is awake and there is not the same chance of being taken by surprise. The tendency, when firing in the dark, is to fire high, with the result that most of the bullets go flying over the trenches, maybe to find a victim 2000 yards behind; many men get killed in this fashion."
